'Times are out of joint', said Shakespeare. These are turbulent times and ticking away fast amidst uncertainty, complexity and paradoxes. We are compelled to move forward from talking to doing things to protect, preserve and reshape our thinking, ways of living and doing business. Many of our traditional market driven models of development and practices are heavily focused on individual prosperity and growth with very little or no concern for collective future well being of the planet. Prolonged cumulative effects of such mad rush for growth and prosperity have pushed the planet to such an edge that if we do not change or replace those outdated environmentally and socially unfriendly practices with planet-friendly, pro-people ones for sustainable living, one day people will find their planet as uninhabitable.

No single solution will fit for all. Individuals have to search for such solutions that takes care his as well as societal plus environmental well beings. Secondly, no solution will have significant impact, if it cannot expand and change the mind-space, ignite the hearts and improve the habitats of millions of people working with hands that are more eager to give than take. A significant message that emerged from the 1st International Sustainability conference is "Matter divides, Spirit unites". One of ways of uniting this physically and culturally multi-polar world is the "Spirit of Sustainability Movement".

The 2nd International conference is committed to carry forward the Spirit of “Sustainable Living and Doing Things for the Prosperity of People and the Planet” and would like to call upon the intellectuals, academia, corporate stewards, activists and policy-makers to join the “Sustainability Movement” and show the world the ways, means and tenets of accomplishing sustainable prosperity for the people of the planet. We welcome all at this event, those who are ready to question the dominant modes of thinking and looking ahead to embrace alternative modes of learning and action for holistic human development and address deeper issues like meaning of work, purpose of life, aim of education (management or otherwise) and welfare of one and all across countries and cultures.
