IIM Shillong INDAM Doctoral & Early Career Researchers' Colloquium

Theme:
Emerging Paradigm in Management Research

JULY 9-11
2024

GENERAL INFORMATION

Management research is a broad and dynamic field that encompasses the study of various aspects of management to achieve organizational goals. Scholars and researchers in management explore a wide range of topics applying various methodologies to understand and improve the functioning of the organizations. Based on the level of analysis and focus management research can be categorized into three broad areas covering macro, meso and micro perspectives. This three-tiered framework facilitates a comprehensive understanding of management phenomena, encompassing the influences of societal forces, organizational structures, and individual or group dynamics. Interactions and dynamics between these levels are also recognized as important, emphasizing the need for a holistic approach to management research. It can help researchers and practitioners address different aspects of management at varying scales and also facilitate the integration of insights from various levels to inform strategic decision-making and organizational development.

The colloquium for doctoral and early career researchers is designed to spotlight the dynamic trends in macro, meso, and micro areas of management research. It endeavors to provide a platform for discussions encompassing a wide range of topics, not confined to any specific boundaries. The aim is to foster exploration and dialogue on emerging themes within the field, encouraging participants to delve into the broader landscape of management research. The colloquium welcomes contributions that span over any of the macro, meso or micro perspectives, or their interplay. This inclusive approach ensures a comprehensive exploration of the diverse and evolving facets of management research.

Format of the Colloquium

This doctoral colloquium is tailored to provide participants with invaluable insights and practical skills to navigate the intricate journey of conducting research and successfully publishing their work. The workshop on research methodology will empower participants with the essential tools, insights, and methodologies crucial for conducting rigorous and impactful research across diverse academic domains. The doctoral colloquium will have parallel round table discussion sessions led by expert eminent panellists where participants will engage in in-depth discussions with seasoned experts, receiving valuable insights and feedback on their research. The colloquium will offer several value propositions for participants like in depth feedback and guidance, networking opportunities, exposure to interdisciplinary perspectives and cutting edge research, enhanced presentation skills, community building and publication opportunities.
